

Volunteers recognised for outstanding service

Volunteers from the City of Wanneroo heritage and library services were recently acknowledged with an appreciation dinner celebrating their hard work.

The volunteers from Buckingham House, Cockman House, the Cockman House vegetable garden, the Community History Museum, Library Books on Wheels and the Wanneroo Library and Cultural Centre and Gallery were recognised.

Mayor Tracey Roberts said it was important to take time out to thank these dedicated community members, and show gratitude for their commitment.

"The City would not be the welcoming and friendly place it is without the efforts of our invaluable volunteers," Mayor Roberts said.

"On behalf of our residents, I extend a big thank you to each volunteer who gives their time so selflessly, making a lasting difference to our community."

The City has more than 500 active volunteers, including the 77 volunteers in heritage and libraries.

The following volunteers were awarded the City's Volunteer Excellence Award for their invaluable assistance:

Bev Bingham - Cockman House Guide, Pam Wells - Buckingham House, David Payne - Libraries Books on Wheels, George Belin and Wilke Clyde - Girrawheen Library English Conversation Group, Peter Meldrum - Clarkson Library English Conversation Group, Tracey Graham - Community History, Christiane Rhodes - Wanneroo Gallery.

It's child's play for City south and central parks

Redheart Park in Carramar is just one of the many City of Wanneroo open spaces receiving a facelift as part of the City's 2017/2018 park asset renewal program.

New playground equipment to the value of $200,000 is being installed at Redheart Park in Carramar, Jackson Park in Madeley and Donatello Park in Landsdale.

Ashdale Park will benefit from new shade sails, as will Greenfields Park in Hocking and Hainsworth Park in Girrawheen ($25,000 each).

Meanwhile, at Appleby Park in Darch recreational basketballers will enjoy using a new shooting-hoop structure worth $15,000.

Mayor Tracey Roberts said the City was deeply committed to providing high quality facilities to the community.

"Parks and playgrounds provide a perfect place for children and families to enjoy the great outdoors and form valuable community connections."
