

9. Discretionary disclosures

The designated employee may disclose in any return any direct or indirect benefits, advantages or liabilities (whether financial or not) which are not required to be disclosed under the Act. The designated employee might choose to do this if they believe that a conflict exists or might appear to exist between their private interests and their duty as a designated employee or for any other reason.